

Flag Bearing Units of the
United States Army Military Police Corps

Lineage, Heraldry and Honors

PREFACE

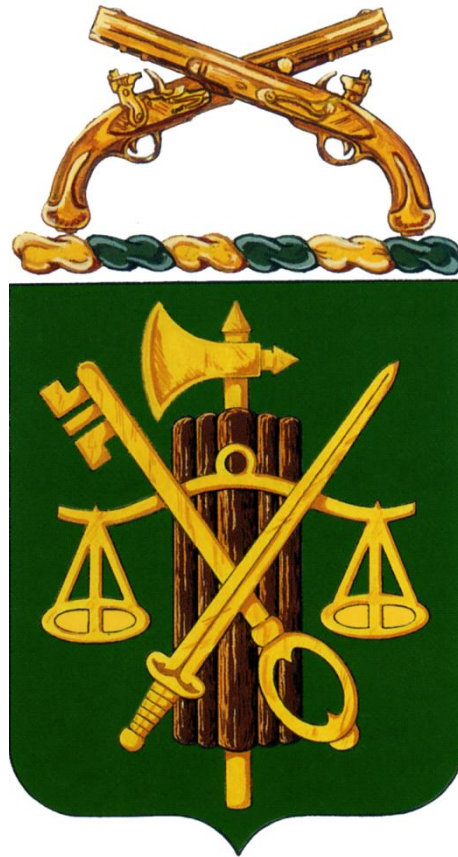

This work is a compilation of the lineage, heraldry and honors of the flag bearing units of the United States Army Military Police Corps. Flag bearing units are those Army units of battalion size or larger that are authorized to carry the National flag and an organizational flag. Military Police Corps flag bearing units consist of commands, barracks, camps, centers, brigades, groups and battalions.

Each Military Police Corps flag bearing unit is listed with the lineage of the unit, campaign participation, decorations awarded and an image and description of the unit insignia. For brigade and larger units, an image and description of the shoulder sleeve insignia is provided. For battalions, the coat of arms is provided with a description and an explanation of the symbolism. Not all Military Police Corps' battalions have a coat of arms. Prior to 1990, only those battalions with organic lettered companies (Company A, B, C, and D) were authorized a coat of arms and a unit insignia. These battalions were termed to be "fixed battalion" because of the standard configuration. Other battalions termed "flexible battalion" consisting of a headquarters and headquarters detachment with no organic companies were not authorized a coat of arms or a unit insignia. About 1965, the Army began authorizing a badge for flexible battalions, which were similar to the unit insignia. This badge was also made part of the organizational flag. In the 1970s, the Army changed all Military Police battalions to the flexible configuration, which caused the cancellation of the coat of arms. About 1990, Army policy was revised and authorized all battalions to have a coat of arms. Also, the term badge was eliminated and the unit insignia was identified as a distinctive unit insignia (DUI).

This work was compiled from the records maintained at the Army Center for Military History, The Institute of Heraldry and the various state Army National Guard headquarters. It is intended to be a work-in-progress and will be changed as new information becomes available. Readers wanting to add or correct information are encouraged to do so.
